Liberia Back in Business

Thanking U.S. and Partners For Their Help Against Ebola

President Sirleaf with President Obama at the White House on February 27, 2015

With Liberia on the verge of being declared free of the deadly Ebola virus, President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf says Liberia has now seized back its future that was once threatened by the dreadful disease that plagued the country.

President Sirleaf declared Liberia back in business when she paid a visit to the United States February 24-March 1, 2015, to thank the American Government and people for the massive response to Liberia's appeal for assistance to combat the deadly pandemic. During various meetings and functions from Capitol Hill to the White House, among others, President Sirleaf thanked President Barack Obama, Members of Congress, the U.S. Military, non-governmental organizations, faith-based organizations, and the American people for the depth of friendship, remarkable partnership and exemplary leadership
